The Arch Street Presbyterian Church is a one-story Classical Revival building, complete with portico and coffered dome. The portico is supported on four giant Corinthian colums, and Corinthian pilasters embellish the walls.

The interior of the sanctuary is regarded by some architects as a masterpiece of the classical revival, mingling Greek and Roman elements. The Church was originally provided with Baroque angle turrets and dome lantern. The interior is extremely monumental with its coffered dome and lavish use of columns, suggestive in some ways of the Parthenon. The central pulpit desk is of marble and is fashioned after a Greek votive altar.

Present Appearance

The magnificent interiors of the church remain in excellent condition. No major alterations to the exterior have been made.

The architect of the Arch Street Presbyterian Church was Joseph C. Hoxie who was associated in the church's construction with his brother-in-law, Stephen Decatur Button. The building was dedicated in 1855. Some of the most notable examples of Greek architecture in the city are to be found in the sanctuary with its 16 Comunthian columns, 22 antae, a majestic dome and pulpit platform.

The Church has had many historic episodes, among them the visit of Emily Dickinson; King Edward VII, then (1860) Prince of Wales; the long service as Sunday School Supt. of the former governor of Pennsylvania, James Pollock, who as director of the Mint inscribed IN GOD WE TRUST on our coins; the address of William Jennings Bryan to a great throng.
